

City honors property owners in 1998 Revitalization Awards Program

The honorees of the 1998 Revitalization Awards Program accepting their awards at a recent City Council meeting were (l to r): Abraham and Jonathon Azoulay with AGF, owners of Promenade Central Shopping Center; Barton Gunter and Jane Gunter of 1311 Timberlake Circle; Michael Richardson and Trea Yip of TY Equity Group, owners of Terrace Supreme Center; John and Lee DeVine of 509 S. Lois Ln.; Timothy and Linda Sokol, and family, of 316 Pittman St.; and Robert Goad and Richard Hancock of InterFirst Leasing. Not pictured: Ted Gupton of Tradmark, owner of Buckingham Place Shopping Center.

Three residences and four businesses in Richardson were recognized in the City's 1998 Revitalization Awards Program. This is the fifth year of the program, which recognizes property owners that have made a positive impact on their property and the surrounding area through enhancement, improvement, or redevelopment efforts. These efforts reflect the pride and investment that have been made not only on the individual properties, but in the community as well. Through the years, 46 properties have been recognized for their revitalization efforts.

The judging committee, which was comprised of Council Members Tom Rohm and Carol Wilson, and City Plan Commissioners Chris Davis and Nancy Wilson, selected the following seven properties as award winners:

Excellence Award:

Gunter residence, 1311 Timberlake Circle

Sokol residence, 316 Pittman St.

Merit Award:

Promenade Shopping Center, 400-600 N. Coit Rd.

InterFirst Leasing, 640 S. Central Expwy.

Terrace Supreme Center, 310 Terrace Dr.

DeVine residence, 509 S. Lois Ln.

Buckingham Place Shopping Center, 1332 S. Plano Rd.